EASTERN GRID TITLE HINGES ON OUTCOME OF GAMES TOMORROW

Supposing Pitt Socks Washington and Jefferson, Yale Whales Tigers and Penn Tumbles State, Then Where Are We?

By STONEY McLINN

THE calendar having indicated that tomorrow is Saturday, November 18, It is hereby announced that three Eastern football communities, each having a name beginning with the sixteenth letter of the alphabet, will watch young college athletes buttle in games that will have a decided bearing on the gridiron championship-or team ranking, if that is more pleasing to you. Philadelphia has the annual Pennsylvania-

Penn State contest-and a stirring one we prediet it will be. Princeton entertains the Yale Bu'ldogsthat always is a grid fight of serious import.

Pittsburgh sends her university lads against the undefeated Washington and Jefferson eleven -and you may bet there will be a struggle Now here is the situation: Penn has been defeated, by Alabama 9 to 7 and by Pite 7 to 6. But the Red and Blue beat the Navy 13-7.

And honestly, in so far as actual scoring strength goes. Penn got a draw with Pitt, since it was fullure at the try-for-point that gave Warner's Panthers the one-point margin last Saturday. Penn State, on the other hand, was bearen by the Navy 14-0 and played a scoreless tie with Syracuse. So far, so good.

Princeton is undefeated, the Tigers having to their credit a 21-18 triumph over Chicago, and last Saturday they made Harvard very sad by a 10-3 conquest. Yale lost the intersectional fight with Iowa 6-0 and was tied by the Army 7.7. Pitt was nosed out by West Virginia 9-6, beaten by Lafayette 7-0 and.

as already stated, got a try-for-point victory over Penn. W. and J. also has a try-for-point win, that of the Presidents being over Lafayette. There in a 7-7 tie with Carnegle Tech on the list of battles fought by Neale's men.

HAVE you followed along earcfully to this point? All right: septhough it may not get us anywhere in particula.

Where Will They Stand Tomorrow?

SUPPOSE Pennsylvania heats State. Also suppose Yale wins over Princeton. And, in the third and last place, suppose Pitt heats W. and J. Now where under the canopy of heaven are we at? We have no undefeated teams among the six mentioned. All, in important games, have shown strength which marks them as top-notchers. It would require more brains and paper than we possess to work out the problem of which, tomorrow night. hould be considered the best and most powerful of the sextet of leading

Never mind that howl. Ithnen! We are not forgetting Cornell. But we are dealing with the present only. Ten days hence, on Franklin Field, Cit Doble's boys will have the opportunity to enter what then may he a merry mix-up of top-notch teams, or-well, suppose we let the future take care

Although some of us may have personal counious about the outcome of the football fights in Philadelphia, Princeton and Pittsburgh tomorrow, that is all they are personal opinions based largely on what we think should happen. Lowering ourselves to the cold, hard turn of the gridien for a sincere and honest survey of the situation, we find six teams that, despite possible to have them. It will be the breaks, the psychology, the fight that will determine the issue. what may have happened in the past, are as caught matched as it would be WITHOUT intention to implant a leather sole upon the corn of any sportsmen who may have offered odds on any of the games. we desire to state that it is even money in Philadelphia; ditto in Princeton; likewise in Pittsburgh. Which means that we shall not be surprised at anything that happens on the gridien tomorrow.

Nittany Lions an Improved Eleven

PENN STATE is bringing a team to Franklin Field that is stronger than the eleven Nistany Lions who were licked by the Navy. Hugo Bezdek has had a line that matched any in these parts. What he needed was a backfield punch. To get this he promoted to varsity togs a husky kid from the scrubs, Wentz by name. He also moved an end, Hufford, tate the backfield. And with Wilson, rated by Navy men as one of the first-string backs of the year. and Palm, a wise and aggressive quarter, he arranged a quartet that toopled over the apple wagon when they beat Carnegie Tech 10-0-the Technical team, remember, having a 7-7 draw with W. and J. to enthuse about. Carnegle had been weakened by injuries to stars, but was a good, strong team, Confidentially-clon't tell Hugo we grinted this-let that Navy wha over State was in the nature of a relief. For nearly three seasons Penn State had been undefeated. Have you ever steed under a black cloud in your summer duds, knowing that rain was due soon and that you must remain out there and get a welting? After you got it you were ready for a cloudburst. That was the state of mind of Berdek and his parills. They knew defeat must come some day-it did come in Washington on November 3. Now they are wet and have returned to the fight with renewed vigor.

Against this Penn State team, fighting desperately to grab the remainder of the games on its schedule, with a powerful line, a revamped backfield and heads filled with the Berdek winning system, Coach Heisman will send cleven men who have learned how to fight. Pena's line last Saturday rose to the occasion splendidly-in fact, no eleven we have watched this year put up a better defensive tight than did the Red and Blue against Pitt in the last

POS MILLER and his mates must show their defensive staff earlier in the game tomorrow if they want to hold State. Besilik - Liens. if they get into Quaker territory early, will fight with fermity equal to that displayed by the Panthers. However, the Quaker concheshace had a full week in which to impress upon the players the list. portance of the first period of the game.

Sullivan Is Penn's Threat

OFFENSIVELY, Penn has a threat that worries all opponents in George Sullivan. When Heisman declared that Sully was the face in the halo he snoke the truth. Putting aside what the gridiron's greatest broken-field runner neight be, or neight be taught to do, the fact remains that he trots in there and scores touchdowns when called upon-or has done this for two Saturdays. It is one canch that Bendek and the Lions will be maxiously and fearfully awaiting the substitution of Sallivan for Motiraw, if Heisman follows his usual plan of attack. Warner and his Panthers have all about Sallyand did they stop him? On the other hand Sudiyan can't do it all; he can't score touchdowns every time he is given the ball.

Hamer, in the litt game, showed improvement, particularly in carrying the ball and kicking. His defensive work has been good all season. If Ertresvang is physically fit, the threat of forward passes by Homer to the plucky and will keep State guessing. Dern's also nee from the line may hurthe is one of the season's today rowing, defensive centers. Adams, however, has had opportunities to show and the conches believe he will do Dern's work

PENNSYLVANIA has an even chance to beat State tomorrow. In fact, if the spirit that they showed against the Navy and Pitt in the final stages of the two battles cames to the fore earlier against the Nittany Lions, Penn can win by one or two touchdowns.

A Traditional Fight at Princeton

DRINCETON, because of her aggressiveness, her never-concede victory spirit and her alertness with a loose ball on the turf, would rule the favorite over Yale but for one important thing-tradition. The Buildors may size up at least one touchdown below the Tigers on paper—but on the chalk-marked gridiron it's quite a different thing.

In New York the wise men who have had frequent occasions to see both coams play incline to the opinion that Yale has the stronger line, the sturdier defense. This may be true. To offset this, we venture the assertion that Princeton has the more versatile attack and a field general in Gorman who will take the long chance if it becomes necessary - and likely get away with it,

Bill Roper always has the opponents wondering what will come nexte, if you prefer, he tutors quarterbacks who direct the surprise stuff. If the Figers uncover that spread formation, with Cleaves and Saively back there to threaten any attacking measure that was ever seen, and some that are w, the Elis are going to have their defense put to a test that even lowa's stack did not put it to. If a break comes along we figure the Tigers to get because that is the kind of football they play,

IF PITT sends the same up-and-at-'em eleven against W. and J. that we Philadelphians looked upon last Saturday there may be an upset in Smoketown. Several Panthers were a bit buttered as the result of the hard fight on Franklin Field. But, eliminating what has happened, the Presidents and the Panthers are two upstanding, opirited teams—and there is some tradition to take into considers-

The fourteenth also found Villa anxious for a knockent. But the wary and enter to stay, and he gave a fine but discrediting crimbition of backstending. Villa chased Goldstein all around the ring and back again for the entire three minutes. Really, it looked founy and seemed unreasonable to see the bigger man so much on the defense.

The fourteenth also found Villa his acquaintanceship.

Another pleasing feature is that J. Friedrick Byers, Pittsburgh, has again been nominated to head the association as its president. Meeting Haverford College

TIMEY are talking of limiting intercollegiate football games at Harvard to a single annual contest with Yale. There is no likelihood that Harvard will take this action, that is, not within the next several years, but the talk is serious and has support. The subject was chosen in two interclass debates and the affirmative was on the proposition:

especially for a quarterback.
